

Province Of Gaul (Modern France)

Resources: One of Gaul’s most important resources was wool, which the Romans usually gathered from the coats of sheep. The fibers of wool were then woven into cloth, which was used for warm outer garments, blankets, and other items.

What To Do: You are responsible for accomplishing one very important goal. You must secure military protection before second phase of this activity begins by agreeing to trade some of your wool for at least one cohort (about 600 soldiers) of the Roman army. Unfortunately, you will have to give up two tokens of wool for each Roman cohort stationed in your province. Remember: Without the protection of the Roman army, you are too weak to survive on your own, and you would rather live under the “civilized” leadership of the Roman emperor than be conquered by a “ruthless” group of barbarians. Therefore, be very assertive in your efforts to trade with the Romans.

Cut out these tokens and trade them for goods from other provinces.
